TOURISM ON A TRAJECTORY

INVESTOR CONFIDENCE BOOSTED BY NEW LAWS AND GOVERNMENT INVESTMENTS IN PHYSICAL INFRASTRUCTURE

Karibu (Welcome) to the eighth edition of the Kenya Association of Hotelkeepers & Caterers (KAHC) Hotel, Restaurant & Entertainment Guide.

It gives me great pleasure to unveil this publication, especially at this critical stage when we have so much to celebrate and highlight. This has been a fantastic year for the tourism industry in Kenya.

While the political and economic environment is very conducive for the industry, we take pride in the passing of the new constitution and the much-awaited Tourism Bill that is awaiting presidential assent. This will set things in motion to help protect investors in the tourism industry, while at the same time helping to streamline the operation of the sector.

INVESTOR CONFIDENCE

In spite of the global economic meltdown, tourism has continued to register impressive figures and is one of the key pillars of the Kenyan economy. This has led to an increased investment in the sector, including new hotel developments in Nairobi and Naivasha.

With Kenya seeking to diversify its tourism product, the recently launched meetings, incentives, conferences and exhibitions (MICE) strategy will go a long way towards positioning

Kenya as the preferred MICE destination in the region. The launch of the MICE strategy comes hot on the heels of plans to build an ultra-modern international convention centre at the coastal resort of Mombasa.

INFRASTRUCTURAL INVESTMENTS

The rapid expansion of the Kenyan economy has been a very positive development. Over the past few years, the Kenyan government has invested millions of dollars in expanding the physical infrastructure. This includes an expansion of the road network, especially in Nairobi, to allow quick and easy movement of people from one location to another.

Major airports have also been expanded and refurbished. These include Nairobi's Jomo Kenyatta International Airport (JKIA), which will have a new passenger terminal and an annual capacity of more than 10 million passengers, and Moi International Airport in Mombasa, which will have a refurbished passenger terminal.

TOURISM AWARDS

Last but not least, the Kenyan tourism industry this year hosted its first-ever Kenya Tourism Awards (KETA) ceremony to reward industry and innovation in the tourism sector. The awards ceremony was graced by, among others, Dr Taleb Rifai, secretary general of the United Nations World Tourism Organisation (UN-WTO).

As we launch the eighth edition of the KAHC Hotel, Restaurant & Entertainment Guide, we hope this publication will continue to play its vital role of marketing Kenya as a favourable tourism destination.

Once again, Karibu Kenya – Welcome to Kenya.

KAHC CEO.

DIVERSITY AND MAGIC OF KENYA ARE JUST WAITING TO BE DISCOVERED

Jambo! It gives me great pleasure to welcome you to the 2012 edition of the Kenya Hotel, Restaurant & Entertainment Guide, which we trust will serve your needs in assessing Kenya's unique accommodation facilities and diversity of mouth-watering cuisine.

The tourism sector is always responding to market and environmental changes and the Kenya Tourist Board (KTB) would like to appreciate this paradigm shift experienced in the industry to accommodate diversity. With an ever-changing clientele, the need for diversity in product range becomes paramount.

PRODUCTS

This guide provides you with a snapshot of Kenya's best accommodation facilities, finest restaurants and, by extension, the diverse products our country has to offer, from its well-known traditional beach and bush holidays to new touristic products such as sport and conference tourism.

KTB welcomes you to enjoy the diversity of products that Kenya has to offer, as described in this guide.

MAGIC

Furthermore, we encourage you to visit and see the magic of Kenya for an unforgettable and enchanting experience.

Once again, a very warm welcome to the magical world of Kenya. Karibuni!

MURIITHI NDEGWA

Managing Director
Kenya Tourist Board

KENYA'S TOURISM SECTOR GOES FROM STRENGTH TO STRENGTH

As 2011 comes to an end, it has been a truly spectacular 12 months for Kenya's key hospitality sector, with record numbers of tourist arrivals and pretty much full hotels across the entire country – especially during the peak season in July and August, coinciding with migration in the Mara and holiday time at the coast.

This welcome trend is a dramatic contrast with the dark days of 2008-9. The turnaround has not been achieved without the efforts of many. In particular, it says much for the tremendous marketing effort by the Kenya Tourist Board (KTB) to promote the nation as a top-notch and desirable destination. Other key factors have been investment by the hotel sector and, of course, a huge vote of confidence in Kenya by the global tourism industry.

GROWTH

It is fair to say that Kenya has also been lucky in 2011 because it has benefited from problems in other competitor destinations. This is particularly true of the coast, which has gained from the disruption to tourism in North Africa; but Kenya has also gained from the continued strength of the euro and the corresponding weakness of the Kenya shilling.

Sometimes you make your own luck, however, and the Kenyan hospitality industry has resolutely refused to stand still or be downhearted. During 2009-10 it poured money into upgrading and modernising its facilities, working hard to improve staff training and attending to food and beverage issues so that Kenya has become of Africa's truly great culinary destinations.

BEST OF KENYA

The launch of the Best of Kenya initiative has spearheaded the country's claim to have not only superb food but also a legion of skilled and knowledgeable chefs who use fresh local ingredients to create mouth-watering dishes that draw upon and fuse the country's three distinct culinary traditions: African, Indian and European.

In Nairobi, despite a series of comparatively recent hotel openings, rooms can sometimes be in short supply. More capacity is on the way. But if the past is any guide, then the additional beds will not quite match the insatiable demand as Nairobi consolidates its position as East Africa's thriving business capital and leading conference and exhibition centre.

Out in the game parks, Kenya's camps and lodges continue to offer a top quality product that compares favourably with rival safari-type destinations across Africa. Growing environmental awareness, backed by the good work and encouragement of organisations such as Ecotourism Kenya, are ensuring that Kenya benefits as a nation from this generally high-end tourism and that this sector acts in a responsible and sustainable manner.

HIDEAWAYS

Down at the coast, hoteliers have also had something of a bumper time. Stretching from Msambweni in the far south to Lamu and beyond in the north, the coast offers hundreds of kilometres of soft white sand, much of it still untouched by international tourism. Then there are Kenya's hideaway islands such as Lamu, Funzi and Wazini, offering a totally different atmosphere from the rest of the coast, with no cars and an unhurried pace of life that has hardly changed for centuries.

REMARKABLE

After a truly remarkable year for the hotel sector in 2011, prospects for 2012 continue to look promising despite the gathering clouds over the global economy. Kenya has proved, in fact, that even in the face of recent economic downturns elsewhere it can prosper by delivering a first-rate tourism product and a competitive price that stacks up when judged by what is on offer elsewhere.

So if you are looking for a great holiday destination, then look no further than Kenya – so much to see and do in just one country.

NAIROBI: EAST AFRICA'S POWERHOUSE CAPITAL

It doesn't always appear promising on arrival at Jomo Kenyatta International or when trying to get into town along Mombasa Road, but be patient and Kenya's capital city and East Africa's bustling commercial and airline hub will soon amaze you. This is one of the fastest growing and busiest cities in Africa – one that can captivate and shock in equal measure.

For many – especially those who come to live here rather than just visit – it is a city they are sad to leave and one to which they vow to come back.

This is a city of more than 3 million people; a bubbling melting pot for most of Kenya's 40-plus ethnic groups, drawn to its bright lights; a place of immense wealth and untold riches lying directly alongside isolated pockets of great desperation.

Nairobi enjoys a vibrancy not found anywhere else in East Africa. It is a place where business deals are signed and sealed, and where the construction of new apartment blocks, glass-fronted offices and hotels never ceases. Now comes – and it is long overdue – the creation of an amazing Chinese-built highway system cutting a path through the city and helping to ease Nairobi's notorious jams and further speed the already frenetic pace of life in a place where visitors are almost overwhelmed by the rush of mankind.

SHOPPING

This is a city of pleasant surprises. Great shopping, restaurants, clubs, bars – you name it, they have it here.

It has fancy shopping malls, from the well established Sarit Centre and Yaya Centre to the UN's own in-house mall, The Village Market, plus newer and more contemporary offerings such as the newly expanded Junction and Westgate, topped off by the recently opened Galleria Mall in Karen.

Nairobi retains some elements of its colonial past: its elite schools and colleges; its sometimes difficult-to-join clubs (throwback to a time when the British wanted to keep themselves to themselves); horse-racing at Ngong; golf at Muthaiga, Royal Nairobi or Karen Country Club. All hark back to an earlier age and have changed little over the decades.

But the city is not just about the past; it is at the very cutting edge of youth and artistic culture with an internationally acclaimed music scene. Much of this is informal rather than organised, yet easy for visitors to find.

NIGHTLIFE

Nairobi is justly famous for its hard-revving nightlife. Nairobians don't go home early from work to watch TV and tend to their roses; they like to party and at the weekends one can expect to find bars full as people let their hair down and drink their way through Kenya's various beers – Tusker, Pilsner and White Cap.

Perhaps surprisingly, this is a city of truly exceptional restaurants where the quality of cuisine is seldom disappointing and with just about every cooking style from the local favourite, nyama choma (roast meat), to the finest Japanese and Italian eateries to chain diners and ubiquitous coffee shops.

If you want to stay over in this exciting city – and who wouldn't – then Nairobi has hotels to match, from colonial-style properties dating back more than 100 years to a range of new and dazzlingly impressive hotels. Nairobi claims to have accommodation to suit just about everyone and enough capacity to host the largest of international conferences and exhibitions.

Be in no doubt, this is a great city – or, as the locals might say, it's poa.

WELCOME TO THE COAST WITH THE MOST

KENYA'S OCEAN RESORTS OFFER A DAZZLING RANGE OF HOLIDAY DELIGHTS

Visitors come to Kenya for a variety of reasons. For many, though, it is the clear blue and irresistibly inviting waters of the Indian Ocean that are the chief attraction.

The Kenyan coast is more or less one long beach – 535 km of soft powdery white sand running at an angle from north to south. Apart from the area around the port city of Mombasa, much of it remains little touched by tourism.

LOCATION

This long and mostly unspoilt coastline can be divided roughly into four areas. Starting in the south and moving northwards, these are:

- The south coast (which, incidentally and bizarrely, is an east coast) runs southwards from Mombasa to the border with Tanzania and includes the main resort of Diani plus lesser-known destinations such as Tiwi, Galu and Msambweni. Beyond the increasingly sophisticated main strip at Diani, which continues to position itself more and more upmarket, there is little development and the area remains a delightfully unhurried backwater dotted with sleepy islands such as Funzi and Wasini. The area is reached either from Mombasa's Moi International Airport or more easily via the airstrip at Ukunda.
- The north coast (again, geographically speaking, it is still the east coast) is more developed than the south coast. It runs northwards from Mombasa and has an ill-defined northern limit. The main resorts area can be characterised as Nyali, Bamburi and Mtwapa with its expensive creekside villas and smart restaurants.
- Malindi/Watamu: Starting at Vipingo (a world-class golf course dotted with attractive villas), this area covers the quiet Kilifi and the busier Watamu and extends to the glitzy Malindi. Kalifi, the least developed of the three main resort towns, has a particularly attractive creek. Watamu is a growing resort with some excellent hotels, while Malindi oozes sophistication with five-star resorts in the jet set style and some fine restaurants. Malindi also has an airport offering daily flights to Nairobi and Mombasa.

- Lamu (and the surrounding islands and mainland) is the last of the four coast destinations. Lamu is an island with no motorised transport. It is also a Unesco World Heritage Site. Lamu has an airport with daily flights to Nairobi and Malindi

VIBRANT

Each of these four areas offers something special. Yet many tourists – especially first-time visitors – often fail to appreciate all the delights of the coast. It is easy to see why when it is difficult to leave the comfort of a hotel offering great food with impeccable service and the beach just a few metres away.

For those who do venture out, however, Mombasa, Malindi, Mtwapa, Diani and Watamu all have a wonderfully vibrant nightlife with inexpensive and lively bars and nightspots where foreigners will always find a reassuringly warm welcome from locals.

MEMORABLE

Here, too, visitors can find some of Kenya's best restaurants, offering succulent seafood plucked fresh from the ocean. Lovers of good food will appreciate the selection of lobster, crab and prawns served in a bewildering selection of cooking styles. Aside from seafood, there is a choice of Italian, Indian and Japanese restaurants plus other types of cuisine. To celebrate that special anniversary, think about taking a dinner cruise by dhow in Tudor Creek or Mtwapa Creek. This is a truly memorable evening and a romantic experience with superb food cooked on board, attentive service and lashings of chilled white wine or thirst-quenching beer with which to wash down the lobster, prawns and other ocean delicacies.

This is what keeps tourists coming back to the Kenya coast.

RICH IN WILDLIFE

Kenya is regarded as one of Africa's truly great wildlife-viewing destinations and this reputation is richly deserved. It is the sheer diversity of the 50 or so national parks, reserves and conservancies on offer that makes Kenya so compelling.

In fact, a visit to just one is not enough to appreciate Kenya's abundant wildlife, different habits and climatic conditions.

This is a country that has it all: from the mighty Tsavo East and West National Parks (a more or less contiguous area divided only by the Nairobi-Mombasa highway and railway) covering a combined total of nearly 22,000 sq km, to the tiny Saiwa Swamp National Park, just 2.9 sq km in area, home to the semi-aquatic sitatunga, an animal that is reasonably common elsewhere in Africa but rare in Kenya.

ACCOMMODATION

No one park or reserve contains all of Kenya's indigenous species, so it is important to organise an itinerary that takes in two or three – or maybe more if birding is a particular interest. For those who just wish to sample a safari as part of a wider visit that might include time at the coast, then the Masai Mara National Reserve, Amboseli National Park and the Tsavos are especially popular. If it's a matter of ticking off the 'Big Five' as fast as possible, then visiting a comparatively small privately run conservancy such as Ol Pejeta might be an option.

Somewhat perversely, several of Kenya best known game viewing areas are administered not by Kenya Wildlife Service (KWS) but by a local town council. The Masai Mara National Reserve and the Samburu National Reserve are run by Narok County Council and Isiolo County Council respectively. These two councils set their own admission fees, although the fees generally follow those charged by the KWS.

For 2012, fees are set at about US$90 per person per day to visit Kenya's most popular KWS-run parks, such as Lake Nakuru National Park and Amboseli, during high season (January to March and July to October). By contrast, some top-rate parks are only US$50 per person per day during low season.

All the major game-viewing areas, and even many of the minor ones, have a selection of camps and lodges from which to choose – some inside and others dotted along the perimeter or close to the main gate. As a general rule, the standard of accommodation is incredibly high, yet there is a range of categories to cater for different budgets.

GETTING THERE

Most camps and lodges offer an all-inclusive package that includes (very early) morning and afternoon game drives and all meals and, probably, soft drinks. The only items to pay for on departure are likely to be the bar bill and tips for guides, drivers and other staff.

Getting between Kenya's parks and reserves has never been easier as the nation undergoes a major road-building and repair programme that has transformed visits from Nairobi to destinations as varied as the Mara, Lake Nakuru and Shaba. In addition, there are more and more operators providing flights from Nairobi (both Jomo Kenyatta and Wilson airports) and Mombasa into more and more parks. But the gap between road and air travel has undoubtedly narrowed in recent times.

Whichever way visitors choose to travel within Kenya, what awaits them on arrival will be truly spectacular.

THE GOOD THINGS OF KENYA ARE JUST WAITING TO BE ENJOYED

Nairobi is not only Kenya's capital and largest city but is the largest metropolis in East and Central Africa. Located about 500 km from Mombasa, Nairobi is the gateway and economic hub of the East African region.

Most major companies and international organisations are headquartered in this vibrant city, commonly referred to as 'the green city in the sun'. Nairobi offers a vibrant mix of entertainment, water sports, golf, gambling and family fun – a lush and tropical fantasy land deep in the city that is also positioned as the region's economic pillar.

The entertainment scene in Nairobi offers a wide range of choices depending on the tastes and preferences of the individual. Here, most entertainment spots are located within close proximity of each other while at the same time being self-sufficient. This is the case with almost every entertainment facility that can be found within a modern metropolis.

EXPERIENCE

Both at the coast and in upcountry regions, the thrill-seeker will experience a thrilling and electric nightlife and entertainment. As in Nairobi and Mombasa, some nightclubs at the coast and upcountry offer revellers and exclusive guests a lavish escape from traditional nightlife. You are guaranteed a perfect deal for entertaining clients as well as your private party such as birthdays, bachelor parties, reunions, etc.

While there is undoubtedly a huge selection of go-go bars across the country, there are also places where you can go for a real cocktail or some freshly cooked food; where you can catch a football game or just chill out with friends and family.

With these in mind, it is now an open secret that the Kenyan entertainment scene has come full cycle. In this new edition, we welcome you to sample Kenya's vast entertainment menu that will no doubt complete an otherwise worthwhile visit to this magical nation. The plot is all about the outdoors, entertainment, food, family and friends! We welcome you, and this time, it is all about invigorating the senses and making the most of the breathtaking scenery around us.

Through our official website (www.perakkenya.co.ke) and direct contacts on the listing in this edition, we have highlighted various outdoor entertainment events taking place around the region.

Do you prefer to embrace the outdoors with a picnic in a botanical garden while listening to a philharmonic orchestra? Or perhaps you are more of an arts and cultural festival kind of person? Either way, this season Kenya is packed with opportunities for outdoor theatre, summer sunset concerts, music, fun, food and happiness. Whichever way you choose to indulge, you definitely need to take a moment and experience some of Kenya's best entertainment spots. With entertainment options such as these at your fingertips, there is no reason why you should not get out there and rejuvenate your cultural, artistic and adrenalin-pumping senses.

Come and exploit please!
